

ANTI-MONEY LAUNDERING AND COUNTER TERRORISM FINANCING

Customer Acceptance and Maintenance Principles

1. Introduction

In compliance with the legal, regulatory and best practices recommendations issued by relevant international entities regarding Anti-Money Laundering and Counter Terrorism Financing (hereinafter abbreviated "AML/CTF"), Banco Interatlântico, SA (hereinafter BI) defined and implemented a clear set of policies, procedures and control systems in order to assess and mitigate possible risks inherent to its customers¹ and the business relationships established.

Consequently, as part of the AML/CTF mechanisms, BI's "Customer Acceptance and Maintenance Principles" document was prepared based on the Cap-Verdean Laws 119/VIII/2016 and 120/VIII/2016 of March 24 and accordingly with the recommendations and guidelines issued by the Financial Action Task Force (FAFT), UN Conventions and EU that require organizations to provide evidence of the effective implementation of preventive and repressive measures to combat these illicit and criminal practices.

2. Objective

This document intends to define the requirements and criteria adopted in the process of acceptance, maintenance or refusal of customers, detailing the different risk categories in which that can be classified.

Aiming to prevent the misuse of the financial system, through the attempt to obtain, conceal or apply funds provided by criminal or illicit activities, this document intends to provide a guiding principle of the whole criteria process for the acceptance, maintenance or refusal of customers, analyzing the risk profile of each customer.

3. Customer Categories and Acceptance Criteria

BI adopted a risk-based approach to manage and mitigate the risk of money laundering and terrorist financing (ML/TF), during the process of identification and classification of customer.

In line with this approach, BI has implemented a dynamic system of money laundering risk classification, by assigning a risk profile to all BI customers.

The assignment of a risk profile to BI's customers starts at the precise moment when a business relationship is established. Each classification is updated, whenever modifications occur related to the customers operating standard or set of related customers, as well as several other relevant factors.

¹ The concept of "Customer" shall be understood in a broad way, including business relationship customers, occasional transaction customers, customer representatives and authorized persons to act on behalf of the customer.

For all customers with a high risk profile of money laundering, BI has set up a set of monitoring and control procedures in order to comply with the legal obligation of enhanced surveillance and the consequent monitoring of all accounts where these are involved.

The following types of customers are automatically framed in the high risk profile of money laundering:

- Natural or legal persons whose scoring tool classifies them, taking into account their ML/TF risk;
- Correspondent banks, whose business relationship establishment are subject of a risk rating process in order to assess the inherent risks of their home jurisdiction, corporate structure, business developed and possible negative references in the scope of the ML/TF.
- Politically Exposed Persons (PEPs), whose business relationship establishment requires a higher hierarchical level of approval. The same applies to "close family members" and "persons recognized as closely associated" with PEPs;
- Customers with non-capverdean nationality who request residence or citizenship rights in Cabo Verde in exchange for capital transfers, acquisition of assets or public debt securities or investment in corporate entities established in Cabo Verde.
- Clients that integrate the Private Banking segment.

With regard to holders of other political or public positions (TOCPP), the procedures described above, regarding the typology of PEP clients, are also applied even though these clients do not automatically assume the high money laundering risk profile due to their classification.

Casuistically, the following customers may also be classified in the high money laundering risk profile:

- Natural or legal persons residing in countries or jurisdictions subject to sanctions, embargoes or other restrictive measures;
- Natural or legal persons related to the production or distribution of arms and related products;
- Natural or legal persons established in offshore jurisdictions;
- Natural or legal persons established or operating in higher risk geographical areas, in particular those lacking effective systems for AML/CTF, evidence a higher level of corruption or other criminal activity;
- Persons residing in countries included in FAFT lists as non-cooperating;
- Natural or legal persons whose activity is incoherent with the existing profile information;
- Natural or legal persons related to activities likely to involve a greater risk of ML/TF such as casinos, betting agencies, payment institutions, exchange houses and similar entities, even if duly authorized;
- Customers with activities that involve cash operations in an intensive manner;
- Customer ownership or control structures that appear to be unusual or overly complex, considering the nature of the customers activity;
- Customers coming from high risk countries or territories according to the Banco de Cabo Verde guidelines and corporate rules.
- Clients for which, according to the analysis carried out and given the risk factors identified, it is considered relevant to have enhanced due diligence.

4. Customer Category and Maintenance of Business Relationships Review

The monitoring procedures to be applied to customers must be in accordance with the risk profile assigned to them, and the risk associated with a customer may be increased if justifiable or in accordance with the legislation and regulations in force.

The reclassification of the risk profile is based on the relationship established between the customer and BI taking into consideration the type and frequency of transactions carried out and their associated risk, as well as the possible change of the customers situation in consequence of their inclusion or exclusion of sanctioned lists or PEPs.

In the exercise of the specific duty of enhanced diligence, and beyond situations related to customers with a high risk profile of money laundering or whose criteria so require, BI will undertake increased diligence in situations of potentially higher risk, being able, whenever necessary, and in situations that so determine, to refuse to establish or to terminate a business relationship.

In accordance with current legislation and regulations, BI may cease any business relationship when it becomes aware or suspects it is related to the practice of ML/TF crimes, and may also refuse or suspend the execution of a transaction ordered by the owner or his representative⁷, when the information required by law is not provided, including information on the origin and destination of the funds.

5. Know Your Customer (KYC)

Customer knowledge is one of the fundamental pillars in assessing the customers appetite for money laundering operations and in the consequent definition of their risk profile.

The adoption of effective KYC measures is an essential part of the risk management of money laundering and terrorist financing, so BI:

- Classifies all customers in its database according to its money laundering risk profile;
- Adjusts the levels of surveillance (simplified or enhanced) according to each customer ML risk profile;
- Defines specific processes for monitoring customers and accounts that may pose a higher risk from the point of view of money laundering and terrorist financing;
- Periodically updates customer data.

In accordance with the applicable legislation, BI performs the necessary and sufficient procedures with the purpose of ensuring the present, accurate and complete information regarding the customers, representatives and beneficial owners.

By implementing appropriate KYC measures, BI insures to obtain detailed identification for each customer, knowledge about the nature of their economic activities and engages all the necessary procedures in order to ensure the effective knowledge about the structures of ownership and control of legal persons.

Prior to the establishment of a business relationship and in the course of this, it is mandatory to provide information on all the identification elements required by the legislation and regulations in force and their supported means of evidence.

⁷ It includes the various types of representatives, namely prosecutors, agents, agents or other forms of representation.

Along the course of the business relationship, prioritization of the information update should be defined according to the degree of risk associated with each customer by BI, with time intervals varying in the inverse order of the degree of the identified risk.

Thus, the implementation of KYC policies and measures assumes the essential function of identifying, assessing and monitoring customer risk in terms of AML/CTF, allowing a more efficient risk assessment and becoming a major important tool for maintaining confidence, stability and reputation of BI.

6. Review Process

BI's "Customer Acceptance and Maintenance Principles" document shall be reviewed, at least, once a year, and whenever there are changes in the context where BI carries out its activities, in particular when legal, regulatory or other changes considered relevant for ML/TF.
